WATCH: Why do we fight for sustainable foods?

Lesson What food do you throw away.

What could you do to avoid that?
Do you know where you could give it away before it spoiled?
Have you ever been hungry?
Have you ever known anyone who has been/is hungry?
Do you try to help How?

SEA GLASS by Anita Shreve takes place during the beginning of the Great Depression in 1929 and 1930. And many of the characters are hungry. Only for High School or college change.org

1.3 billion tons of food are wasted every year, and all while millions of people go hungry. That number is staggering – and in the face of such a complex problem, it's easy to turn a blind eye or declare the solutions too hard to find.

Luckily, we have you.

Everyday people like you are turning to Change.org to face this problem head on, and together your voices, your signatures, and your support have impacted millions of lives around the world.

We made a short video about the fight for sustainable foods, will you watch it?

Whether it's asking big companies like Walmart to sell less-than-perfect-looking produce that is otherwise thrown out, standing up for policies that ensure animal welfare standards are upheld, or insisting that more retailers sell only cage-free eggs, your voice has mattered.

The conversation that you have helped to ignite is crucial to our future, and the future of millions of others. Can you take the next step?

Watch this video, share it with your friends, and help spread the word.