Women’s Rights Are Human Rights

Dr. Tamana from Afghanistan

Thank you for your support of Physicians for Human Rights. Following the U.S. election, our colleagues around the world are looking to us to fight back against the misogynistic, exclusionary, and dangerous ideas espoused by President-elect Trump. And it’s not just in the United States.

Look at the story of Dr. Tamana from Kabul, Afghanistan.

Dr. Tamana – a female physician in a nation where women and girls can be charged with illegitimate moral crimes – came to a recent Physicians for Human Rights workshop to learn how to train colleagues to collect court-admissible evidence of human rights court-admissible evidence of human rights abuses.

She’s working to ban the scientifically-dubious and physically-invasive practice of “virginity testing.” In Afghanistan, women who are accused of adultery and new brides who don’t bleed on their wedding night as expected are often forced to undergo a humiliating hymen examination – and then shamed and rejected by family and community members alike. Some women are imprisoned as a result of these spurious tests. Some are killed. Some kill themselves.

Now that Dr. Tamana has been to our workshop, she’ll be able to train more clinicians and mobilize more professionals to help her in this cause. And one day, she says, “there will be no victims of hymen examinations in Afghanistan.”

We celebrate Dr. Tamana’s work – we’re proud to work with her and she inspires us to continue to fight for women’s rights and dignity around the world.

But we couldn’t have run the workshop without you. So, together Victor, we will continue to work for human rights and justice. Every day. Even if it’s harder than the day before. Thank you for your ongoing support.

With my thanks,

Karen Naimer
Director, Program on Sexual Violence in Conflict Zones

Physicians for Human Rights
info@phrusa.org
phr.org

Do not reply to this email; please contact PHR here.

256 W 38th Street, 9th Floor, New York, NY 10018

We respect your right to privacy. You may read our Privacy Policy or update your preferences online. If you would no longer like to receive our updates, you may unsubscribe here.